Island of Timber

The Menominee Forest has been described as an island of timber in an ocean of clear land. The Menominee have inhabited North Eastern Wisconsin and part of Michigan's Upper Peninsula for thousands of years. The ancestral tribal lands encompassed over 15 million acres. The current Menominee Reservation boundaries, containing 235,000 acres were established in 1854 following several treaties and land cessions.

The Menominee forest is one of the oldest managed large forest tracts in the United States. In the last 150 years the forest contains more volume than when it started in 1854. It has harvested 2.5 billion board feet. In other words, they have cut the forest 2.5 times in volume in the last 150 years and still have more volume than when they started with large trees still remaining.

The story of how this quarter million acre remnant of once vast forest biome persists is of culture, wisdom, and commitment to a place with vigilance and restraint being applied.

"Start with the rising sun, and work toward the setting sun, but take only the mature trees, the sick trees and the trees that have fallen. When you reach the end of the reservation, turn and cut from the setting sun to the rising sun and the trees will last forever."

- CHIEF OSHKOSH
